FIENDISH CRIME CHARGED AGAINST W. N. McDOUGALL

before Judge A. Stronach, of the high court of American Samoa will be submitted to him.

There was considerable doubt as to in what manner McDougall should be treated. The offense being committed on the high seas made the proposition a difficult one for the governor of Samoa to handle. He cabled Secretary of War Daniels and the latter immediately replied that the proper course to follow would be to remand McDougall to the nearest American district court, or rather the first American soil the steamer conveying McDougall would touch at.

It is said that McDougall claimed to be a New Zealander, but papers in his possession go to show that he is a citizen of the United States.

The parents of the girl reside in German Samoa and they are not coming to Honolulu to give direct evidence in the case. Their sworn affidavits are in Honolulu, and Commissioner Davis will study them carefully before going further with the matter.

Several wireless messages were sent from the Ventura to the naval commandant in Honolulu. The messages were sent on to Marshall Hall and he at once got into touch with District Attorney McCann, Judge Dole and Admiral C. B. T. Moore. The last named was at one time governor of American Samoa, and he is familiar with the manner in which court cases of all kinds are treated at Pago Pago.

There was considerable doubt as to whether Marshall Hall was required to issue a warrant for the arrest of McDougall. The wireless messages were rather vague, and the marshal did not know if McDougall was in custody of an officer, or merely a passenger on the ship who had been placed in irons by the captain. However, later on, more definite messages came and it was made clear that no warrant was necessary to take McDougall from the ship.
